

History: What kind of Monarch would you be?

What should I already know?

Children used talk to organise, sequence and clarify thinking and used past, present and future forms accurately. Children showed interest in the lives of people who are familiar to them and remember and talk about significant events. During the Autumn term, children studied changes within living memory and aspects of change to national life as well as events beyond living memory that are significant nationally/globally.

Past	Present	Future	Chronology	Monarchy	Royal	Legacies
Past refers to	Happening	A time that	Arranging something	A form of government that	Having the status	Something that time gone by,	now.Not in	is to come.	by the order they	has a single person at its	of a king or	is handed down
having taken	the past or		occurred in time.	head, knows as the Monarch.	queen or a	from one period place in a	the future.			They use titles such as king,	member of their	of time to period before				queen, emperor or empress.	family.	another period
the present.			1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1			of time. POSTAGE EL POSTAGE POSTAGE EL POSTAGE EL

Legacies

- Roads
- Art and Culture
- Postage
- Clothing

Queen Elizabeth I's time in power is known as the 'Elizabethan
Age'

Queen Elizabeth I was the Queen of England, Ireland and Wales from 1558-1603. Her reign was known as the 'Golden Age'.

Queen Victoria's time in power is known as the 'Victorian Age'

Elizabeth II is the Queen of Great Britain and is the longest reigning monarch. She is the head of the Commonwealth of 53 nations. Queen Elizabeth II has 4 children and at least 8 grandchildren.

Queen Victoria was the Queen of England from 1837-1901. When Victoria became queen, children had to go out to work. By the time she died, children went to school.